BASIC-ABSTRACT:

NOVELTY - A software which generates a different installation number is installed. The installation number is submitted to the software publisher. The registration number generated from the installation number is obtained from the software publisher. The software is registered using the registration number.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION - The installation number is broken into groups by the software publishers and these groups are repositioned to make-up the registration number. The groups of the installation number are added, subtracted, multiplied, divided or any combination to form a registration number.

USE - For computer software.

ADVANTAGE - The user using or copying software illegally or trying to duplicate the software is stopped.
